OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY OF DIXON BY ACT OF CITY COUNCIL

Telegraph Sixty-Second Year

DIXON, ILLINOIS FRIDAY MARCH, 7 1913

Dixon Daily Telegraph Thirtieth Year No. 56

GROVER IS LEGAL COMMISSIONER IS SCOTT'S RULING

COUNTY JUDGE OVERRULES THE SIXTH OBJECTION TO W.
SECOND ST. PAVING.

CLERK IS FAIR COMMISSIONER

City Clerk Grover Has Done Work of Making Up Assessment Roles in a Very Satisfactory Manner.

Judge R. H. Scott in the county court this afternoon, in overruling the sixth objection of the property owners who are opposed to the pavement of West Second and tributary streets, held that the fact that Blake Grover is city clerk does not disqualify him from being commissioner of special assessments and that the fact that the city council has ruled that the two per cent received by him for collection of the special assessments shall be paid into the city treasury does not in any way invalidate the assessment rolls spread by him.

Court's Findings.

The court's ruling in full is: "The court rules that the appointment of the commissioner was, so far as the record here shows, made by the proper officer. That it is immaterial that the commissioner who levied the assessment here happens also to be an officer of the city. That it is not shown that the commissioner is pecuniarily or otherwise interested in the work in hand in any way that should or does disqualify him or render him an incompetent person. The ordinance in Section No. 45 (revised) allowing the commissioner a commission of 2 per cent on the amount by him collected on special assessments, is superseded and inferentially repealed by later ordinances."

"Even though that part of the ordinance in question which provides that the collector shall account to the city for the 2 per cent which he has heretofore retained as his compensation for collection is invalid, still that does not render the commissioner incompetent to spread the assessments contended by counsel for the objectors. The commissioner is estopped from claiming any interest or right to such commission."

Former Work Valid.

It was shown this afternoon that even had Judge Scott held that City Clerk Grover was an incompetent person to spread the assessment it would have in no way affected any previous work undertaken and passed upon which he had done work on, the law providing the objections on the competency of the assessment commissioner must be made before the confirmation of the roll, otherwise such objections are invalid and the judgment confirming the roll is valid and binding.

Defend City Clerk.

In speaking of the questions that were raised concerning the competency of City Clerk Blake Grover to act as commissioner of assessments because of his being employed by the city and the turning over of the two per cent commission into the general fund of the city, one of the commissioners stated to a Telegraph representative this morning that while the technicality may be well taken, he fails to see where the objectors will gain anything.

"Even if City Clerk Grover has no right to be the commissioner of assessments," said this commissioner, "I cannot see just how the objectors hope to gain anything, for if the proceedings are knocked out by the court on these contentions, it will simply mean that the board of local improvements will have to start all over again, hire a special assessment commissioner, to whom the two per cent shall be paid, and still Mr. Grover's salary will be the same. The result will be increased costs to the tax payers, delay in the improvement and the elimination of a strictly competent and honest commissioner."

Grover a Good Man.

"For City Clerk Blake Grover is undoubtedly the best assessment commissioner we ever had. He has been exceptionally fair to the property owners. He does not do as many commissioners do, sit in his office and spread the assessment from the map

EXPLOSION ON U. S. COLLIER KILLS MANY

SEVENTY-FIVE TO ONE HUNDRED
KILLED—BRITISH SHIP WAS SUNK.

CAUSED BY A TIDAL WAVE

Dynamite Being Loaded on Barge Exploded, Creating Terrible Havoc—Shock Felt in Three States.

Baltimore, Md., March 7—Special to Telegraph—With a tremendous detonation that was felt in three states and caused an enormous loss of life, a barge load of dynamite exploded in the Patapsco river today.

The number of dead is placed at between 75 and 100 men, though because of confusion and trouble in identifying the bodies and impossibility of finding many of them, it is difficult to state the exact number. Fourteen bodies have been recovered.

The British steamer, Alum Cine, which was anchored in the river, and the U. S. collier Jason, upon which a large cargo of dynamite was being loaded in preparation for transportation to the work on the Panama canal, was badly damaged. Four men were killed and 12 injured on the Jason alone.

The blast was caused by a tidal wave which swept into the harbor here, damaging many ships. The shock of the blast was so extensive that tall buildings in the state of Delaware were shaken.

WARD'S TEAM WON FROM REGULARS

CAPT. MILLER OF THE CUB YAN-
NIGANS, SCORES A VICTORY.

Ward is setting a pace to make Clymer, Mitchell and a few others step lively. The Yannigans evened up the series by winning yesterday by the score of 9 to 7.

HUNG HIMSELF IN ROCKFORD JAIL

MAN SUICIDES WITH BELT AF-TER DELIRIUM TREMENS ATTACK.

Rockford, March 7—Special to Telegraph—Demented through alcoholic excesses, Richard Anderson, aged 26, a furniture finisher, committed suicide by hanging himself in a cell at the county jail where he had been placed Wednesday afternoon following an attack of delirium tremens. He used his own leather belt for the noose. Slipping the belt through the buckle, he tied the end to the bunk above the one he occupied, and then thrust his head through the noose. The weight of his body brought pressure enough against the throat to cause strangulation.

of the property affected. Instead, he goes out over the ground several times, makes measurements himself and consults with affected property owners and people who are familiar with the conditions. His work has been exceptionally satisfactory, and the attack on his competency, even if it is based on a legal technicality, is manifestly unfair.

Continue Work.

"But no matter if the court does knock us out on this proposition," continued the commissioner, who is a member of the board of local improvements, "you can be sure that we will keep right on with our plans for public improvements, for the majority of the people are in favor of the work."

LIFE OF HENRY DEMENT RECOVERS COST OF IS INTERESTING STORY

AURORA BEACON TELLS OF RESIGNATION OF VETERAN INSPECTOR.

WAS A FRIEND OF LINCOLN

Former Dixonite Comes From a Brilliant Line of Soldiers and Statesmen, and He Himself Has Enviable Record.

The following story, copied from the Aurora Beacon, concerns a former resident of Dixon, Postoffice Inspector Henry D. Dement, a gentleman whose connection with this city is a source of great pride to us all, for a finer man never walked our streets. Mr. Dement is a brother of Mrs. George Squires and Mrs. E. C. Parsons.

Mr. Dement and his charming wife live in Wilmette, Ill., with their daughter, Mrs. Rugg. There are also three other daughters, Mrs. Brown, in Dakota; Miss Nonie, now in Europe, and Miss Lucia, who spends most of her time in New York City.

A note of Mr. Dement's resignation from the service has been published in the Telegraph, but the following from the Beacon, is worthy of reproducing:

Henry Dodge Dement, postoffice inspector for 14 years, assigned to the district including Kane and adjacent counties, who announced his resignation while in Aurora a few weeks ago, left the service Friday at midnight, after half a century of almost continuous public employment, says the Aurora Beacon-News.

Capt. Dement became a republican when Sumpter was fired upon. He does not care to hold office under the administration of another party, he says. He is 72 years old and believes he is entitled to rest. His leaving was voluntary as the inspectors are under civil service.

It is not because of infirmity that he has retired, as last fall he was detailed in the Blue Ridge country of Virginia, where the Allens had recently assassinated a whole court and he put in time inspecting rural routes through the mountains, following outlaws' paths, and riding rough roads for two months, returning hale and hearty and more rugged than before the ordeal.

Personal Friend of Lincoln.

During his active years in affairs he was closely associated with many whose lives are now a part of the nation's history. He knew Lincoln intimately, knew Grant and was a friend of Generals Logan and Oglesby and the Yates. There are others among his intimates who figured prominently in history.

Among the pertinent suggestions are:

Please do not ask or expect the judge to act as your lawyer.

Always leave as little as possible for the court to guess at.

Please be prompt.

MRS. MAUDE KINYON

DIED IN THE WEST

NIECE OF MRS. MARGARET STEPHAN PASSED AWAY AT OMAHA TODAY.

Franklin Grove, March 7—Special to Telegraph—Mrs. Maude Kinyon, formerly of this city, died this morning in Omaha of pneumonia, after a brief illness.

The funeral will be held at Harvard, Neb., Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Frank Goetzenberger of this city and Mrs. Margaret Stephan of Dixon will attend the funeral.

Mrs. Kinyon was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Krehl who moved from here to Clinton, Ia., where they reside now, about 18 years ago. Beside her husband, Hollie, and two little children, a boy and a girl, aged four and two, she leaves her parents and a brother, Jesse, who made his home with her, and many relatives in this vicinity. Mr. and Mrs. Kinyon had lived in Harvard until a few weeks ago, when they moved to Omaha.

The news of the death of this beautiful young woman, who was about 30 years of age, is a great shock to the many friends and relatives in this vicinity.

25 CENTS AND COSTS VERDICT IN GODFREY VS. WESTERN UNION SUIT

PARTITION DECREE ORDERED

Judge Farrand Ordered Decree for Partition in Lebre vs. Lebre Case This Morning.

William H. Godfrey was today awarded a verdict against the Western Union Telegraph Co., for the sum of 25 cents and the costs of the suit which he instituted recently and which was tried in this term of court. He alleged that because of the misdating of a telegram which he sent to Barrington, Ill., from this city, which reached Barrington dated Belvidere, he incurred a pecuniary loss of $168. Attorney Harry Edwards was his counsel.

The Telegraph company, represented by Attorney George C. Dixon, maintained that there was nothing on the face of the message to indicate, nor had the local operator been informed, that it pertained to business matters, and that therefore the company was liable only for the fee received for transmitting the message. Numerous court decisions were read sustaining this contention, and Judge Farrand, on the reconvention of the Circuit court this morning, gave his decision as stated above.

Partition Decree

Prior to taking up the Godfrey matter Judge Farrand ordered a decree for partition in the Lebre vs Lebre case; and ordering the appointment of commissioners.

DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR A BAD LIVER OR SLUGGISH BOWELS

This Gentle, Effective Fruit Laxative Thoroughly Cleans Your Stomach, Liver and 30 Feet of Bowels of Sour Bile, Poisons, Gases and Clogged-Up Waste.

A harmless cure for sick headache, for biliousness, for a soar, gassy, disordered stomach, for constipation, indigestion, coated tongue, salowness, pimples—take delicious Syrup of Figs. For the cause of all these troubles lies in a torpid liver and sluggish condition of your thirty feet of bowels.

A teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs tonight means all poisonous waste matter, the undigested, fermenting food and sour bile, gently moved on and out of your system by morning, without griping, nausea or weakness. It means a cheery day tomorrow—many bright days thereafter.

Please don't think of gentle, effective Syrup of Figs as a panacea. Don't think you are drugging yourself, for luscious figs, senna and aromatics can injure anyone.

This remarkable fruit preparation is a wonderful stomach, liver and bowel cleanser, regulator and tonic, the safest and most positive ever devised.

The day of violent purgatives such as calomel, pills, salts and castor oil is past. They were all wrong. You got relief, but at what a cost! They acted by flooding the bowels with fluids, but these fluids were digestive juices. Syrup of Figs embody only harmless laxatives, which act in a natural way. It does what right food would do—what eating lots of fruit and what plenty of exercise will do for the liver, stomach and bowels.

Be sure you get the old reliable and genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Company. Hand back, with scorn, any Fig Syrup imitation recommended as "just as good."

Getting at It.

"Margaret, that young man who calls on you seems to have lots of money. What's his business?"

"He's a broker, I think, father. Anyhow, he sells stocks and bonds and things like that."

"H'm! Is he successful at it?"

"Yes, very."

"His own boss, too, I presume?"

"Yes, he tells me he can go and come whenever he pleases."

"That's what I thought. Well, he can't do that around here. Just tell him tomorrow night, will you, that ten o'clock is quitting time in this house. I'm still boss here, and while he may come when he pleases, he's got to go when I say so."—Detroit Free Press.

Amused the Warden.

Ray T. Baker, warden of the Nevada penitentiary, is abolishing with wonderful success all the brutalizing rules of the old-time prison system. Mr. Baker's prisoners lead healthy, industrious lives. They study and they work. And on leaving the prison they engage in honest labor.

"Our institution," Mr. Baker said to a reporter, "isn't much like a reformatory I once visited in my youth."

"A very strange thing happened to this reformatory back in '89,' a warden said to me."

"Yes? And what was that?" I asked.

"One of the prisoners," he replied, "reformed."—New York Tribune.

"Farming methods have changed, haven't they?"

"Yep," replied Farmer Cornfossel.

Below we are very glad to report several items which were sent us by some of our progressive readers.

Saturday evening the many friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mrs. Susie Butler, and pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. Andy Butler, who are to leave next week for Laures, Ia., to make their future home.

The occasion was also a surprise to Frank Butler and bride who returned Saturday from Chicago on their wedding trip. The evening was spent in playing games. At a late hour refreshments were served, consisting of salads, sandwiches, coffee, pickles, cake fruit and candy. The guests departed at a late hour, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Butler success in their new home. Their many friends presented them with a handsome reading table by which they will long remember those who regret their departure.

Frank Butler and bride have just returned from Chicago and will be at home to their many friends after March 15th, in Bradford township, where the groom's brother has been living. Many congratulations to them.

Andy Butler has been loading his car bound for Iowa this week.

The News has made a big improvement this week in its editorial staff by securing the services of the junior editor to fill this space for the issue. This is the time of the year, when we fellows are mighty busy, so for this issue we will make you acquainted with another member of our writing force. You will hear from him often from now on and we feel certain you will like his work better than that which has been printed from the old hands for some time. We would write more of an introduction, but the train is now being held for this letter to reach the printer's office so we will have to complete the task in the next copy. Watch for it. Not fewer than 30,000 shells were fired by the Greek guns during the first day's bombardment.

Gradually the Turkish batteries of Bizani, Manolara, Sakni and elsewhere were silenced. By a feint the Greek commanders led the Turks to believe that their attack would be made from the right. As soon as the attention of the defenders had been distracted the Greeks hurled large bodies of infantry against the Turkish left. The Ottoman troops, utterly surprised, fell back in disorder.

Batteries Reduced to Silence.

The batteries on the heights of Bizani, the mainstay of the defense, had been unable to stand the pelting of the shells and were reduced to silence at eleven o'clock in the morning. The Greeks pushed their forward movement during the afternoon and occupied the Turkish batteries on the Sakni and Elas hills, capturing all the guns and 110 artillerymen. Then the Greek battalions gradually deployed onto the plain in front of the city it.

Immediately the Turkish flight became general, despite all the efforts of the Ottoman officers to rally their men. Whole detachments yielded to panic and joined in a mad race into the city. The Greek troops followed hot pursuit almost to the walls.

Turkish Commander Surrenders.

With all the defending batteries in the hands of the Greeks and the Ileilic soldiers at the gates of Janina, Essaad Pasha, the Turkish commander, sent messengers under a flag of truce to Crown Prince Constantine of Greece, announcing the surrender of the city and all the troops under his command.

Three Transports Are Sunk.

Vienna, Austria, March 7.—The Turkish cruiser Hamidiye sunk three Greek transports loaded with Servian troops on the way to Scutari, according to a Constantinople dispatch to the Neue Freie Presse.

DIAZ SEEKS BIG LOAN

Ex-President to Ask $100,-
000,000 for Mexico.Aged General Regards Present Mexican Situation as Grave, Owing to Depleted Treasury.

Cairo, Egypt, March 7.—Porfirio Diaz received from Provisional President Huerta of Mexico, a pressing appeal entreating the former president to return to Mexico as soon as possible. The former dictator has made the same reply to this request as to all previous ones. As yet he has not announced his reason for refusing to return to his native country, but to those who are familiar with the situation his real reason is apparent. General Diaz admitted that he regards the present Mexican situation as very grave, chiefly owing to the empty treasury. He will leave here next Monday on the Adriatic for Europe where he will endeavor to negotiate with European bankers for a $100,000,000 national loan.

Mexico City, March 7.—While there is no apparent diminution in the confidence of the government to eventually force pacification of the country, it is quite evident that the task is much greater than was at first.

Francisco Guzman, secretary of the revolutionary junta, has succeeded in getting Porfirio Bonilla, the rebel leader of the state of Tlaxcala and 650 of his followers, to submit to the Huerta government. Among the other rebel chiefs who submitted to the provisional government are Montelongo with 300 men, Guerra with 200 men, both from the state of Tlaxcala; Penaguis and Luna from the state of Hidalgo, with 200; Del Pozo and Ambrosia Erics from the state of Puebla with 200; Caddile and his 1,100 men from the state of San Luis Potosi and Emilio Llamas from the state of Tamaulipas with 150 men.

Omaha, Neb., March 7.—Another block of witnesses, most of them implement dealers, was on hand here to testify for the defense in the government's case against the International Harvester company for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. The states of Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota were again represented. C. H. Newberry of Alliance, Neb., was the first witness called. He testified to having a business of $250,000 a year, and estimated that four-fifths of his sales were manufactures of the International company, but said he had not been coerced into carrying its line exclusively.

New York, March 7.—Plans are being arranged for the wedding of Miss Ethel Carow Roosevelt, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, to Dr. Richard Derby of this city. The wedding will be in the Episcopal church in Oyster Bay, L. I., on April 4, and a reception will follow at Sagamore Hill, Colonel Roosevelt's estate, April 4 coming on Friday, and evidently Miss Roosevelt and her fiance have no superstition as to marrying on that day, which was chosen because they are to sail for Europe on the following day.

LAND OF ORANGE BLOSSOMS

South of France Relied on for Marriage Emblems Worn When English Brides Go to Altar.

In many ways the modern marriage differs from the weddings of yesterday, but with all the changes the ceremony is not really complete without orange blossoms. A huge quantity of the pure white fragrant flowers are used every year at fashionable ceremonies, and yet not many people seem to know where they all come from.

As a matter of fact, nearly all the orange blossoms which come to London are grown in the south of France, a few miles inland from the coast line of the Riviera, says the Daily News of that city. Here, where the sheltered valleys of the Alps Maritime lie basking in the sun, are found the orange orchards whence comes the supply of blossoms for British weddings.

Of course, a large proportion of the orange flowers is used in the manufacture of that perfume for which Grasse has become so famous, but many growers make a special feature of supplying sprigs for the marriage ceremony. None of these trees are permitted to bear fruit and the greatest possible care is taken over the cultivation, so as to insure an abundance of blossoms. When in full flower the trees present a most attractive appearance, the dark evergreen foliage showing up in fine contrast to the gleaming white petals. It is one of the peculiar habits of the orange tree that it will remain in flower for a considerable part of the year; thus the owner of a well managed orchard can at almost all times find a few blossoming shoots.

During the spring and early summer the orange trees are most full of blossoms and it is then that the largest quantities are dispatched. All day long the pickers are at work in the orchards. Curious stepladders are used so that the gatherer may be able to reach all parts of the trees. The orange flowers are going a long journey and on this account it is necessary to pick them before they are fully expanded. Happily, they keep well for a long time, and the blooms will be nice and fresh when they are unpacked thirty-six hours later in the florist's shop. After being kept in the dark, cool place, with their stems in warm water for a few hours, the petals will expand beautifully and be ready for use.

Orange flower growing is possibly one of the most flourishing industries in the world, in that the demand always exceeds the supply. Any superfluous blooms which a grower may have are always greedily swallowed up by the scent makers, whose wants can never be fully met. Most of the orchards are owned by small holders, and in many cases these have been retained in the family for a large number of years. Thus it is not an easy thing for a newcomer to be able to secure an orchard save on the rare occasions when these are offered for sale. The starting of an orange orchard is a very slow business, as the trees are not quick growers and it is some time before anything in the way of crops can be expected.

Miss Nellie Rice has resigned her position at Self's confectionery and is now in charge of the office at the Hart & Nettz garage.

OPERA HOUSE.

The vaudeville bill at the opera house this week is not only one of class, but there is plenty of it. Three excellent acts occupy the boards. Miss Hilda Orth opened the bill last evening with a single singing specialty and was a winner with her phenomenal deep baritone voice; this act is on the 18-karat line, and Miss Orth certainly known how to put over her songs. The Barley Girls in their singing and dancing act received plenty of applause. And McClure & Dolly as novelty equilibrists, certainly scored a hit. This evening as an additional attraction the two reel special feature picture, 'Redemption' will be shown.

PRINCESS THEATRE.

Tonight the Princess will exhibit a wonderful two reel feature photo play entitled 'A Romance of the Utah Pioneers.' This picture deals with the several hundred pioneer settlers comprising the famous historical Hand Cart Immigration Party, that left Iowa for the west. It is a combination of a western and Indian drama with stupendous mobilization scenes and plenty of battle scenes. A comedy entitled 'Jones' Wedding Day' will also be shown.

PLAN BIG CELEBRATION

PROPOSITION TO EXTEND THE INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Many Suggestions Made by William Knowles Cooper of the Y. M. C. A. to the Committee—Would prolong the Ceremonies.

Calling attention to the fact that the beauties, resources and traditions of the national capital belong to the whole country, William Knowles Cooper, general secretary of the Washington Young Men's Christian association, has written to the committee in charge of the plans for an "Inauguration week," suggesting that these assets of a local and national character be commemorated in connection with any prolongation of the inaugural exercises.

Chairman Game of the committee stated that if the inauguration should be held in April, in accordance with the wishes of President-to-be Wilson, plans for a week of festivities at the later date would be considered.

On the assumption that the customary inaugural ceremonies will occur Tuesday, March 4, Mr. Cooper has suggested that the five days succeeding that date be utilized for the purpose of national celebration. He proposes that Wednesday, March 5, be designated as National Arts day, Thursday as National Resources day, Friday as National Defense day, Saturday as National Fraternities and Recreation day and Sunday as national day of worship.

Not only has Mr. Cooper written to the joint publicity committee of the Chamber of Commerce and Retail Merchants' association, but he also has brought the desirability of arranging for such a celebration as he proposes to the attention of District Commissioner Rudolph, Capt. James F. Oyster, president of the chamber of commerce, and Edward F. Droop, president of the board of trade.

Plans for a national arts day should provide for a featuring of the museums, libraries and art collections of the city, Mr. Cooper points out. Cooperation with the theaters should be sought, so that the dramatic art may be displayed at its best, while singing societies, he suggests, should be asked to arrange concerts for each evening.

Mr. Cooper's plans for a national resources day contemplates the bringing in by the government departments of their experts and exhibits to show the agricultural, mineral and industrial wealth of the nation and the relation of the federal government thereto.

For national defense day it is suggested that there be displays of relics at every convenient army post, at the navy yard, at the state, war and navy building and historic spots in and around Washington, with such other features as may be found feasible for illustrating the national defense.

Saturday, March 8, is the day proposed for national fraternities and recreation day. The morning should be given over, it is proposed, to gatherings of fraternal societies, lodges, etc., while the afternoon, Mr. Cooper believes, should be given over to the playgrounds, athletic associations, clubs, etc., for the promotion of contests. In the evening a display under the auspices of organized labor, with a city illumination and torchlight procession, is proposed.

A parade of children, representing all churches and denominations, is one of the features of the Sunday observance as outlined by Mr. Cooper. The parade, it is suggested, should pass in review at the Capitol plaza before the president, the vice-president and the members of the cabinet.

ANCIENT PATENTS BY WOMEN

Interest Value Depends on Whether They Are Considered as Genius or Junk.

Way back in a corner of the model morgue there are some ancient patents invented by women. The interest value of the collection depends upon whether you look at it as genius or junk. If you have eyes that see nothing extra in that cowslip by the river's brim, you might as well have yourself a trip to the patent office, but if your sight can vision the spirit view of a thing, every musty contraption will reflect, as some dim old mirror, the personality of the women who pieced it into shape. The time record of these inventions run from 1790 to 1888. One of the oldest is a brass cylinder that looks like an andiron with a fuzzy head, but it isn't. It is a marine telescope for seeing things under the waves. Another something that looks like a keyless typewriter is an "appliance" for the defense of war vessels, if you please, while the cheerful rivalry of corpse coolers, coffins, laying-out boards and floral ornaments for tombstones, with plows, life rafts and grubbing machines, offer convincing refutation of the placid doctrine that the way-back woman cared only for cradles and quilting bees. Some of the inventions must have been serviceable, and many of them were obviously dead failures.

They are all buried together in the potter's field of oblivion. It is the way of the world.

Washington Police Head's Excuse Greeted by Derision.

Suffragists laugh when Chief tells why their parade was not safeguarded.

Washington, March 7.—Congressional investigation to determine the responsibility of the police for the riotous scenes attending the suffrage parade here got under way in earnest when the senate committee appointed for the inquiry began hearing witnesses.

Police Chief Sylvester presented a report in which he held that fifty policemen to each city block would have been unable to control the crowd, and attributed the breaking of the cable near the end of the line of march as the chief cause of the jam in Pennsylvania avenue from the capitol to the treasury.

While his report was being read choruses of derisive laughter came from the woman suffragists gathered in the room.

Chairman Jones announced that Miss Alice Paul would present the witnesses for the suffragists. The first was announced as Miss Julia Lathrop, chief of the government's children's bureau; S. S. McClure, the publisher; Rear Admiral Van Reypen, and Mrs. H. T. Upton.

Senators Jones, Dillingham and Pomerene are members of the committee, and they announced that they proposed to go to the bottom of the matter.

PUT STREET LIGHTS IN WEST BROOKLYN

I. N. U. MAKES IT POSSIBLE FOR RESIDENTS OF VILLAGE TO HAVE ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

Wm. Cahill, superintendent of the overhead construction in District D, was in West Brooklyn yesterday with a crew of twelve men, installing a twelve-series tungsten bracket street lighting system.

Will Light Homes.

Although electricity has been in West Brooklyn for several years, having been brought down on the Oregon transmission line, it was in use in a very few places, but the work of the I. N. U. has made it possible for the residents of the hustling little town to wire their residences and stores, and they will soon have all of West Brooklyn a-twinkle with the 'bottled fire.'

DID NOT DRINK LIQUOR.

We are informed that the statement in last evening's paper saying that Will Scrivens and George Hanna took several drinks in the saloon in Amboy is slightly in error, for Mr. Scrivens himself refrained from drinking.

Iono-Magnetic Rotation.

A new phenomenon has been observed by Professor Right to which he gives the name of iono-magnetic rotation. If a spark from a condenser of considerable capacity is sent horizontally through a gas and two small vertical vanes of mica in the form of a cross are suspended in the middle of the discharge by a fine fiber attached to the center of the cross, the spark produces no rotation of the cross. If, however, a vertical magnetic field is established in the gas, the cross rotates through a considerable angle if the gas is air, and over a small angle in other gases. Professor Right ascribes this rotation to the bending of the paths of the ions or electrons and to the additional protection which the vanes afford each other against impacts from one side rather than from the other in these circumstances. The observed rotations indicate that the effects of the positive ions are in general greater than those of the negative.

WAGE WAR BY RULE

Rigid Etiquette Governs Conflict of Modern Powers.

Written and Unwritten, but All Well Understood, Are the Regulations Under Which Battles of Today Are Fought.

War—that is, warfare between civilized nations—has its code of etiquette, known as the customs of war, some of which are written, others said London Answers, tacitly agreed to.

Obvious examples of fighting etiquette are the rules which protect the Red Cross flag of the ambulance, and forbid the use of explosive, or, with limits, expanding bullets.

Nominally, a general may use any means in his power to bring his foe to subjection, but there is a well-defined boundary line. A leader may cut off his enemy's food and water supplies. He may subject him to all the horrors of famine and thirst; but he must not poison his food or water.

Suppose a place is besieged, and that outside the walls are wells which the besiegers cannot effectively hold, and which the besieged can reach under cover of night. The besieger would be justified in sending parties to fill up the wells with earth and stones, or to destroy them with dynamite. On the other hand, to pollute the wells with poison, or to throw dead animals into them, would be an infamy.

A "prisoner of war" has his rights. He may be asked to give his parole to promise not to escape; but he must not be forced to give his parole, and is not to be punished for refusing to do so. A prisoner is liable to be shot, either when escaping or if retaken alive.

An unparoled prisoner may also be shot while in the act of escaping; but if recaptured, it would be murder to shoot him, and he should not be punished for his attempt, though he may be placed in more rigorous confinement.

A prisoner may be compelled to earn his "keep" by working at his trade, if he has one, or by doing work for his captors not of a purely military nature. Thus, he may be ordered to assist in draining the camp in which he is a prisoner; but it would not be fair to put him to building fortifications.

The customs of war justify the employment of spies, but under certain rules. If a soldier voluntarily turns traitor, the other side is entitled to make use of him, but it is not "cricket" to tempt a soldier to betray his own side.

If thus tempted, a man may pretend to turn traitor and deceive the enemy with false information. On the other hand, voluntarily to go over to the enemy, pretending to be a traitor or deserter, would be dishonorable conduct—that is, if the pretended traitor is an officer or soldier.

A spy, of course, has no rights, and is at all times liable to be shot or hanged at sight.

An officer or soldier, however, caught in the enemy's camp, must not be treated as a spy, but as a prisoner of war, provided he is not disguised.

If a commander takes part in a charge, or persistently exposes himself to fire, he must take his chance of being shot; but in big affairs it is not the "game" to detail marksmen to try to "pick off" your opponent's general, though every effort may be made to capture him.

When a city or town is bombarded public buildings—unless used for defensive purposes—should be spared as far as possible. When a place is captured, the victorious foe is entitled to seize art treasures and so on and to hold them to ransom. To injure or destroy them would be the act of a vandal.

When a country is invaded, the invader can compel the inhabitants to supply him with food and other supplies and to act as guides, workmen and drivers.

A person who, not belonging to any recognized military force, takes up arms against an invader, is liable to be shot when captured. Retaliation is sanctioned by the customs of war.

It is military vengeance, and takes place when an outrage committed on one side is avenged by the commission of a similar act on the other.

Thus, an unjust execution of prisoners held by the enemy may be followed by the execution of an equal number of prisoners held by the opponents.

CHAPTER XII.

Thorne Takes Charge of the Telegraph Office.

Arrelsford stared after the departing figures with a mixture of amusement and contempt and annoyance in his glance. So soon as the door had closed behind them he turned to Lieutenant Foray, who was regarding him with ill-concealed aversion.

"Let me have that dispatch," he began in his usual peremptory manner.

"You said you had an order, sir," returned Foray stubbornly.

"Yes, yes," replied the secret service agent impatiently, throwing an order on the table, "there it is, don't waste time."

But Lieutenant Foray was not satisfied, principally because he did not wish to be. He scrutinized the order carefully, and with great distaste at its contents. It was quite evident that if he could have found possible pretext for refusing obedience he would gladly have done so. His sympathies were entirely with Miss Mitford.

"I suppose you are Mr. Benton Arrelsford, all right?" he began deliberately, fingering the paper.

"Certainly I am," returned Arrelsford haughtily.

"We have to be very careful now, days," continued Foray shortly. "But I reckon it's all right. Here's the telegram."

"Did the girl seem nervous or excited when she handed this in?" asked the other, taking the message.

"Do you mean Miss Mitford?" asked Foray reprovingly.

"Certainly, who else?"

"She was anxious not to have it seen by anybody?"

"Anxious? I should say so. She didn't even want me to see it."

"Umph!" said Arrelsford. "I don't mind telling you, Mr. Foray, that we are on the track of a serious affair and I believe she's mixed up in it."

"But that dispatch is to young Varney, a mere boy, the general's son," urged the Lieutenant.

"I didn't know he had gone to the front. So much the worse. It's one of the ugliest affairs we have ever had. I had them put me on it, and I have got it pretty close. We have had some checks, but we will end it right here in this office inside of thirty minutes."

There was a slight tap on the door at this juncture. Arrelsford turned to the door, opened it, and found himself face to face with a soldier, who saluted and stood at attention.

"Well, what is it?"

"The lady's here, sir," said the soldier.

"Where is she?" asked Arrelsford. "Waiting down below at the front entrance."

"Did she come alone?"

"Yes, sir."

"Show her up here at once. I suppose you have a revolver here," continued the secret service man, turning to Lieutenant Foray, who had listened with much interest.

"Certainly," answered Foray. "We are always armed in the telegraph office."

From a drawer in the table he drew forth a revolver which he laid on the top of the table.

"Good," said Arrelsford, "while I want to handle this thing myself, I may call you. Be ready, that's all."

"Very well."

"Obey any orders you may get, and send out all dispatches unless I stop you."

"Yes, sir."

"And if you don't mind, I don't care to have all these messenger boys coming back here. I will order them to stop in the hall. If you have any messages for them you can take them out there. I don't want to have too many people in the room."

"Very good, sir. Will you give the order to your orderly when he brings up the young lady?"

"Yes."

Arrelsford stepped to the door, and Foray busied himself with the clicking instruments. After a few minutes' conversation with the orderly who had just returned, Arrelsford ushered Edith Varney into the room. With not even a glance at the operator in her intense preoccupation, the girl spoke directly to Arrelsford.

"I've accepted your invitation you see."

"I am greatly obliged to you, Miss Varney," returned Arrelsford with deferential courtesy. "As a matter of justice to me it was—"

"I didn't come to oblige you," answered Edith haughtily.

She had never liked Mr. Arrelsford. His addresses had been most unpleasant and unwelcome to her, and now she not only hated him but she loathed him.

"I came here," she continued, as Arrelsford attempted to speak, "to see that no more—her voice broke for a moment, "murders are committed here—to satisfy your singular curiosity."

"Murders!" exclaimed Arrelsford flushing deeply.

The girl nodded.

"The Union soldier who escaped from prison—" she began.

"Is the man dead?" interrupted Arrelsford.

"The man is dead."

"It is a curious thing, Miss Varney," continued the other with cutting emphasis, "that one Yankee prisoner more or less should make so much difference to you, isn't it? They are dying down in Libby by the hundreds."

"At least they are not being killed in our houses, in our drawing-rooms, before our very eyes!"

She confronted Arrelsford with a bitterly reproachful glance, before which his eyes for a moment fell, and he was glad indeed to turn to another orderly who had just entered the room.

"Have you kept track of him?" he asked in a low voice.

"He's coming down the street to the department now, sir."

"Where has he been since he left Mrs. Varney's house?"

"He went to his quarters on Carey street. We got in the next room and watched him through a transom."

"What was he doing?"

"Working on some papers or documents."

"Could you see them? Did you see what they were?"

"They looked like orders from the war department, sir."

"He is coming here with forged orders, I suppose."

"I don't doubt it, sir."

"I surmise that his game is to get control of these wires and then send out dispatches to the front that will take away a battery or a brigade from some vital point, the vital point indicated by 'Plan 3.' That's where they mean to attack tonight."

"Looks like it, sir," agreed the orderly respectfully.

"Plan 3,' that's where they will hit us," mused the secret service agent, "is there a guard in the building?"

"Not inside, sir," answered the orderly, "there's a guard in front and sentries around the barracks over in the square."

"If I shouted they could hear from this window, couldn't they?" asked Arrelsford.

The guard in front could hear you, sir. But the time is getting short. He must be nearly here; you'd better look out, sir."

Edith Varney had heard enough of the conversation to understand that Thorne was coming. Of course it would never do for him to see her there.

"Where am I to go?" she asked.

"Outside here on the balcony," said Arrelsford. "There is no closet in the room and it is the only place. I will be with you in a moment."

"But if he should come to the window?"

"We will step in at the other window. Stay, orderly, see if the windows are open."

"Well, you know how it is. They generally whip around quite a while before they make up their minds what they want to do. I don't suppose they will trouble you much. It's as quiet as a church down the river. Good night."

"See here, Mr. Foray, wait a moment. You had better not walk out and leave—no matter," continued Thorne, as the operator stopped and turned back. "It's none of my business still if you want some good advice, that is a dangerous thing to do."

"What is it, captain?" asked Foray, somewhat surprised.

"Leave a cigar lying around an office like that. Somebody might walk in any minute and take it away. I can't watch your cigars all day."

He picked up the cigar, and before Foray could prevent it, lighted it and began to smoke. Foray laughed.

"Help yourself, captain, and if there is any trouble you will find a revolver on the table."

"I see," said Thorne, "but what dow of the commissary general's office, the next room to the left, is open."

They waited while the orderly went out on the balcony and made his inspection.

"The window of the next room is open, sir," he reported.

"That's all I want of you. Report back to Corporal Matson. Tell him to get the body of the prisoner out of the Varney house. He knows where it's to go."

"Very well, sir."

"Mr. Foray," continued Arrelsford, "whoever comes here you are to keep on with your work and don't give the slightest sign of my presence to any one on any account. You understand?"

"Yes, sir," said Foray from the telephone table in the center of the room.

He had caught something of the conversation, but he was too good a soldier to ask any questions, besides his business was with the telegraph, not with Mr. Arrelsford.

"Now, Miss Varney," said the secret service agent, "this way, please."

He opened the middle window. The girl stepped through, and he was about to follow when he caught sight of a messenger entering the room. Leaving the window, he retraced his steps.

"Where did you come from?" he said abruptly to the young man.

"War department, sir."

"Carrying dispatches?"

"Yes, sir."

"You know me, don't you?"

"I've seen you at the office, sir, and—"

"I'm here on department business," said Arrelsford. "All you have to do is to keep quiet about it. Weren't you stopped in the hall?"

"Yes, sir, but I had a dispatch from the president that had to be delivered to Lieutenant Foray."

"Well, it is just as well," said Arrelsford. "Don't mention having seen me to anybody under any pretext and stay here. You might be needed. On second thoughts, Foray, let any messenger come in."

With that Mr. Arrelsford stepped out onto the balcony through the window, which he closed after him, and he and Edith disappeared from view.

"Messenger," said Foray, "step down the hall and tell the private there that by Mr. Arrelsford's orders messengers are allowed to come up as they report."

"He was down at the cabinet meeting," said Foray, "but I might as well, there is going to be trouble."

"Oh, well, there might be."

"Been having a bad dream?" asked the captain nonchalantly.

"No, but you never can tell. All sorts of things are liable to happen in an office like this, and—"

"That's right," said Thorne, pulling away at his cigar, "you never can tell. But see here. If you never can tell when you are going to have trouble you had better take that gun along with you. I have one of my own."

"Well," said the operator, "if you have one of your own, I might as well."

He took the revolver up and tucked it in his belt. "Look out for yourself, captain. Goodby. I will be back as soon as the president gives me that dispatch. That dispatch I have just finished is for the commissary general's office, but it can wait until the morning."

"All right," said Thorne, and the next moment the operator turned away while the clicking of the key called Thorne to the table. It took him but a few minutes to write the brief message which he addressed and turned to the first messenger, "Quartermaster General."

"He wasn't in his office a short time ago, sir," said the messenger.

"Very well, find him. He has probably gone home and he has to have this message."

"Very good, sir."

The key kept up its clicking. In a short time another message was written off.

"Ready here," cried Thorne, looking at the other messenger. "This is for the secretary of the treasury, marked private. Take it to his home."

"He was down at the cabinet meeting," said Foray, "but I might as well, there is going to be trouble."

"No difference, take it to his house and wait until he comes."

The instant the departing messenger left him alone in the room Thorne leaped to his feet and ran with cat-like swiftness to the door, opened it, and quickly but carefully examined the corridor to make sure that no one was there on duty. Then he closed the door and turned to the nearest window, which he opened also, and looked out on the balcony, which he saw was empty. He closed the window and came back to the table, unbuckling his belt and coat as he came. These he threw on the table. The coat fell back, and he glanced in the breast pocket to see that a certain document was in sight and at hand, where he could get it quickly. Then he took his revolver, which he had previously slipped from his belt to his hip pocket, and laid it down beside the instrument.

"I am ordered to stay here until you get back," he began casually, shoving the paper aside and stretching his hand toward the key.

"That's an odd thing, captain," began Lieutenant Foray dubiously. "I understood that the president was meeting with the cabinet. In fact, Lieutenant Allison went over there to take some code work a moment ago. He must have gone home, I reckon."

"Looks like it, sir," said Thorne quietly. "If he is not at home you had better wait."

"Yes," said Foray, moving away.

"I suppose I had better wait for him. You will have to look out for Allison's wire, though, on the other table. He was called over to the department."

"Oh, Allison!" said Thorne carelessly. "Be gone long, do you think?"

"Looks like it, sir," said Thorne quietly. "If he is not at home you had better wait."

"Yes," said Foray, moving away.

"Outside here on the balcony," said Arrelsford. "There is no closet in the room and it is the only place. I will be with you in a moment."

"But if he should come to the window?"

"We will step in at the other window. Stay, orderly, see if the windows are open."

"Well, you know how it is. They generally whip around quite a while before they make up their minds what they want to do. I don't suppose they will trouble you much. It's as quiet as a church down the river. Good night."

"See here, Mr. Foray, wait a moment. You had better not walk out and leave—no matter," continued Thorne, as the operator stopped and turned back.

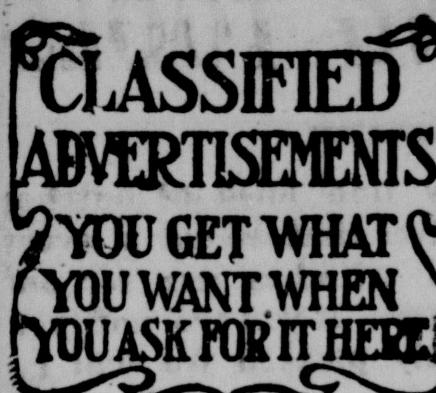

"It's none of my business still if you want some good advice, that is a dangerous thing to do."

"What is it, captain?" asked Foray, somewhat surprised.

"Leave a cigar lying around an office like that. Somebody might walk in any minute and take it away. I can't watch your cigars all day."

"Here, here," said Thorne, as the messenger turned away, "what's all this?" He ran his fingers through the envelope, tore it open, and spread out the dispatch. "Is that the secretary's signature?" he asked.

The messenger came back.

FRIEDMANN GIVES FIRST TREATMENT

Phthisis Serum Given Three Patients Before Clinic of Forty Physicians.

DENOUNCED AS A BIG FAKE

Methods of German Specialists Scored by Practitioners Who Witnessed the Demonstration—Actions Are Severely Criticized.

New York, March 7.—Flush faced and red with anger, Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedmann, the Berlin bacteriologist and his brother, Dr. Arthur C. N. Friedmann, strode away from the humble little People's hospital in Second avenue here.

The German specialist had just made the first public test of his alleged tuberculosis "cure" in the presence of forty New York physicians.

"Most of the physicians state that they were not impressed with your serum," Doctor Friedmann was told. Blasphemous Physician.

Dr. Arthur Friedmann answered for his brother.

"We do not care what they say," he replied with nervous explosiveness. "Damn them! To — with them! In two months we'll be treating hundreds of patients and they'll be crawling around us begging for our serum."

Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedmann, despite the chilly breezes, mopped his forehead with a handkerchief and listened while his brother continued:

"This is a matter for medical experts. In a month we'll be treating thousands. That's our answer."

Neither Friedmann would say a word about the demonstration of the cure in the tiny operating room of the little hospital. Most of the physicians, however, who witnessed the infections of his marine turtle germ serum were open in their criticisms.

Declares Him a Fake.

Most unspoken of these was Dr. Jules Broder, visiting physician at the People's hospital.

"This man is another Doctor Cook. He should be driven from the country," declared Doctor Broder. "He is an absolute fake! He knows nothing even of the rudiments of medicine. He was not able to infect properly."

Doctor Friedmann treated only three cases out of the two dozen. And he took two hours to do this. Of the three cases, Patients Landesman and Spiegel are old men and the other, Miss Werger, is a buxom young woman. In all three cases the clinical diagnosis was in doubt.

"All of us noted that Doctor Friedmann brought his syringe wrapped in a piece of paper and took scarcely no sterilizing precautions. His injections I am convinced were faulty. I do not believe he knew where to find a vein. His injections accordingly probably went into the muscles and not the vein."

No Immediate Results.

According to Doctor Broder, Doctor Friedmann made a speech after the injections which was translated into English by his brother, in which he stated the serum would have no effect for two or three weeks. In eight or nine months he said he would be able to tell if the patient needs another injection.

"Think of that!" exclaimed Doctor Broder. "He will be able to tell, not if the patient is cured or on the way to a cure, but whether the patient needs another injection. Think of the enormous profits that can be reaped by treating thousands of patients within the next few months!"

Among those who witnessed the test were Dr. Woods Hutchinson and E. W. Kellogg, M. D., health commissioner of Milwaukee. Doctor Kellogg made the following laconic comment to the waiting newspaper men:

"I had intended requesting Doctor Friedmann to go to Milwaukee for the purpose of further demonstrating his theory. That is not my intention now."

WHY

"Canned foods are wholesome; absolutely so. They are protected from contamination, dust, dirt, odors and foul air by being sealed in air-tight cans.

"Nothing whatever is used in canning except heat, which is the great natural sterilizer. Canned fresh foods are sealed and cooked in the cans and subjected to a heat of from 220 to 260 degrees Fahrenheit, after the cans are sealed. Consequently they need but little, if any, cooking, when the cans are opened. Warming the can, before opening, in hot water, is usually sufficient.

"No preservatives, no antiseptics, no drugs, nothing but heat is used; sometimes sugar or syrup or a little salt is added, but that is to make the goods palatable, not to preserve them.

"Nothing but heat is necessary. It is a reliable, cheap and wholesome preservative, and no canner ever thinks of using anything but pure, simple heat with which to sterilize his canned foods. He would be foolish to use chemical preservatives. It would be illegal and is prohibited by both United States and State laws, and besides it would cost more and be less reliable, should he attempt to use any other method but heat. Consequently, canned foods are the most wholesome foods known.
